At the request of Rep. Waxman, GAO investigated whether children in Medicaid receive necessary screening for lead poisoning. In February 1998, GAO found that most Medicaid children had never been screened, and that an estimated 352,000 children covered by Medicaid probably had lead poisoning that was undetected. Documents and Links

- GAO Report