Dear President Fuchs:

We write with deep concern about recent actions by the University of Florida (UF) to prevent professors from providing testimony and written submissions in litigation challenging the constitutionality of actions taken by the state of Florida, in violation of the First Amendment and in contravention of long-established principles of academic freedom.

According to reports, in July 2020, UF revised its conflicts-of-interest policy to require all employees to seek approval from the university before engaging in outside activities.¹ Prior to this change, employees only needed to notify the university of their outside activities and financial interests as they arose.² UF professors reportedly objected to this change, expressing concerns that the policy would be “used as a prior restraint on speech.”³ The professors’ fears were confirmed when UF subsequently prevented multiple faculty members from participating in litigation raising legal and constitutional concerns related to criminal justice reform, voter suppression laws, and the state’s ban on mask mandates.⁴

¹ University of Florida, Conflicts of Commitment and Conflicts of Interest (Nov. 10, 2020) (online at policy.ufl.edu/policy/conflicts-of-commitment-and-conflicts-of-interest/). According to this policy, “outside activities” are defined as “any paid or unpaid activity undertaken by an Employee outside of the University which could create an actual or apparent Conflict of Commitment or Conflict of Interest. Outside Activities may include consulting, participating in civic or charitable organizations, working as a technical or professional advisor or practitioner, or holding a parttime job with another employer.”

⁴ UF Restricted Five Other Professors’ Participation in Legal Cases Against the State, Miami Herald (Nov. 2, 2021) (online at www.miamiherald.com/news/politics-government/article255487301.html).
We are concerned that UF is censoring its faculty based on viewpoint, which would set a dangerous precedent that flies in the face of its own commitment to freedom of expression.5 We are also concerned that, possibly due to pressure from trustees, politicians, or others, UF has adopted and enforced a conflicts policy that undermines the academic and free speech values that are essential to American higher education. As one of the top five public research universities in the nation, UF must ensure that it is not creating the appearance of anticipatory obedience or that it is responding to political pressure in deciding which speech activities it will permit.

In July 2020, under its new policy, UF prevented four law professors—Kenneth Nunn, Sarah K. Wolking, Teresa Jean Reid, and Mark Fenster—from referencing their university affiliation in an amicus brief submitted in support of challenges to the state legislature’s changes to a constitutional amendment restoring the voting rights of felons in Florida—the same litigation in which UF political science professor Daniel Smith participated as an expert witness in 2019.6 According to reports, UF subsequently denied three requests from Dr. Jeffrey L. Goldhagen, a pediatrician and UF medical school professor, to testify in lawsuits challenging Governor Ron DeSantis’s July 2021 ban on school districts’ mask mandates, even though he would not have received any compensation.7

In October 2021, UF initially blocked three more professors—Daniel Smith, Sharon Austin, and Michael McDonald—from testifying as experts in a lawsuit challenging Florida’s new restrictive voting law, S.B. 90.8 In denying the professors’ requests to testify, UF officials explained that because the school is a state institution, testifying in litigation that conflicts with Governor Ron DeSantis’s administration “is adverse to U.F.’s interests.”9 UF’s decision came approximately one week after two of the professors published an October 7, 2021, op-ed in the Tampa Bay Times accusing the state legislature of violating Florida’s 2010 anti-gerrymandering Fair Districts constitutional amendments.10

Until last year, UF had a longstanding practice of allowing professors to participate in administrative and judicial proceedings even when seemingly “adverse to the university’s interests as a state of Florida institution.”11 For example, prior to July 2020, Professor Smith

11 Florida Bars State Professors from Testifying in Voting Rights Cases, New York Times (Nov. 4, 2021) (online at www.nytimes.com/2021/11/04/us/florida-professors-lawsuit.html). For example, Professor Smith, one of
served as an expert witness in numerous voting rights lawsuits in which the state was named as a defendant. According to Professor Smith, in the past, UF “celebrated” professors’ involvement in activities that brought “national recognition to UF.”

Smith was even allowed to serve as a consulting expert in lawsuits against the university involving early voting on college campuses in Florida.13

After significant backlash, on November 5, 2021, you indicated plans to reverse course regarding Professors Smith, Austin, and McDonald’s participation in the S.B. 90 litigation, requesting that UF officials “approve the requests regardless of personal compensation, assuming the activity is on their own time without using university resources.” You also ordered a task force to “review UF’s practice regarding requests for approval of outside activities involving potential conflicts of interest and conflicts of commitment.”14 This was an important reversal, but many questions remain about whether UF’s conflicts-of-interest policy is still in effect and, if so, whether the university will continue to implement the policy in a manner inconsistent with the First Amendment.

The Subcommittee is investigating the extent to which your university’s actions have undermined the integrity of academic freedom and interfered with employees’ constitutional right to speak freely as private citizens on matters of great public concern. In addition, we seek to understand the extent to which federally funded universities use conflicts-of-interest policies to censor employees who oppose the interests of the political party in power.

Protecting First Amendment rights is a priority for the Subcommittee on Civil Rights and Civil Liberties and falls squarely within Congress’s constitutional oversight authority.15 The Oversight Committee, under the leadership of both Democratic and Republican chairs, has previously investigated potential deprivations of First Amendment rights by government actors—including public universities.16
For these reasons, we request that you produce the following information by December 2, 2021:

1. Identify all individuals who were consulted or otherwise involved in the creation, revision, or development of UF’s 2020 Conflicts of Commitment and Conflicts of Interest policy and any other policies related to requests to participate in outside activities; and

2. For each request by a UF professor to engage in outside activities that was denied under UF’s Conflicts of Commitment and Conflicts of Interest policy or a related policy from January 1, 2015, to the present, provide:
   a. the name, title, and department of the professor;
   b. the nature of the request;
   c. a detailed explanation for the denial;
   d. the name, title, and role of each individual involved in reviewing or denying the request; and

Jim Jordan, then-Chairman of the Subcommittee on Healthcare, Benefits, and Administration, stated, “This committee is committed to help colleges reinstate the freedom of speech as an important protection. After all, it is no coincidence that the Constitution’s Framers prioritized the freedom of speech in the First, the First Amendment.”_
