DAVID D. DONIGER

David Doniger is policy director and senior attorney for the Natural Resources Defense Council's Climate Center. Doniger represented NRDC in Massachusetts v. EPA, the Supreme Court's landmark 2007 ruling that the Environmental Protection Agency must take action under the Clean Air Act to address the carbon pollution that causes global warming. Doniger leads the NRDC legal team helping defend EPA's initial carbon pollution standards against industry-led lawsuits and legislative attacks.

Doniger served for eight years in the Clinton administration, primarily as director of climate change policy at the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency. He worked at NRDC from 1978 to 1993 and rejoined NRDC in 2001.
