The Honorable Ashton Carter
Secretary
U.S. Department of Defense
1000 Defense Pentagon
Washington, DC 20301-1000

Dear Mr. Secretary:

Shortly after the Pentagon first acknowledged that an Army facility in Utah inadvertently shipped live anthrax to a commercial laboratory in Maryland, it also stated that “more than a dozen labs were affected in nine states.”¹ More recently, the Pentagon announced that the scope of the live anthrax distribution is far more widespread. According to the Pentagon, live anthrax samples have now reached 68 labs, 19 states, the District of Columbia, and four foreign countries.² Deputy Secretary of Defense Robert Work also acknowledged that these numbers will likely increase as investigators determine the extent of the shipments.³

The distribution of live anthrax to labs across the country, and around the world, raises questions about the federal government’s protocols for handling and shipping anthrax and other pathogens. Based on information obtained from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), we understand that the live anthrax samples originated from the Dugway Proving Ground. Before the samples are shipped from Dugway to laboratories, they are (1) irradiated to kill any live spores, and (2) tested to ensure the irradiation treatment was successful. In this case, both phases of the process failed.

We recognize the need to study anthrax and other deadly diseases, and the importance of calibrating detection equipment for incoming mail at secure buildings across the country, among other things. The legitimate reasons to ship anthrax must be balanced against national security and public health interests. We are writing to request information that will help the Committee determine whether the Department of Defense and other relevant federal entities are taking adequate precautions to protect the public from the inherent dangers associated with shipping dangerous biological agents. To assist the Committee, please provide written responses to the following questions as soon as possible, but no later than 5:00 p.m. on June 24, 2015:
